GEROME RAPS MURPHY, CALLS FOR A REVOLT.

The District-Attorney Calls Upon the District Leaders for a Show of Hands in the Fight for the Gubernatorial Nomination.

District Attorney Jerome to-day called for a show down of the Tammany district leaders in the Governorship fight. Particularly did he call upon Sheriff Hayes as one of the leaders, who has a position for the next three and a half years with a good salary assured, to come forward and say where he stands on the gubernatorial situation.

In addition to this, the District-Attorney threw a few hot ones at Charles Francis Murphy, and paid his respects to William Randolph Hearst and the Independence League.

Stories about town that the announcement of Jerome's candidacy had fallen upon barren soil led to a request that he show some of the indignities he is reported to have received. This Mr. Jerome declined to do.

Asked if he had received as many indignities this year as he had last he said he had received more when the length of time of his candidacy had been taken into consideration, but added that he did not feel at liberty to locate the individuals who were for him.

Not a Frost, He Said.

When told that the politicians considered his candidacy a frost he answered that the condition between his candidacy this year and last were in no way analogous; that then he was a public official who had done his duty and was about to be placed on the totem pole and shot into the wide, wide world.

"They said," declared Mr. Jerome, "the situation was not analogous last year and predicted I would be beaten. They said in 1904 that I would kill Low, and there was no precedent to go by. What a politician doesn't know about an election is a whole lot. What he generally knows about is a politician's subject of the Democratic Convention, and Mr. Jerome said:

"That is not the problem. What good are conventions without votes. A convention without votes is not a convention. It fails to express the will of the people."

The inference might be drawn that you would be a candidate whether you are nominated by the convention or not," said The Evening World reporter.

"I cannot help what interpretation is placed on my language. The Democratic convention was the result, and Mr. Jerome continued: "A convention should express the will of the people and not the bosses."

Pays Respects to Hearst.

"If Mr. Hearst is nominated by the Democratic Convention will you support him?"

"What is the use of talking of the impossible? You will never face that situation. The Democratic party has had to swallow some pretty bitter draughts in the past, but will never stand that medicine."

"Have you seen what Mr. Hearst says about you?"

"Yes, I saw that."

"Then what you and Mr. Hearst think of each other is about horses-and isn't it?"

"There is no question of Hearst in this matter," said Mr. Jerome. "The man Hearst does not know me. Hearst the man is a man of no class and of no importance. He is like a man who has been in the great world and who can expect him to talk until Gram gets back."

Attack on Coker.

"The question about Hearst revolves itself into the persons about him whose ideas worked upon an added brain and armed a hand to play a President. And along these lines is reflected in the conduct of the great leader of the independence league in Brooklyn—Borough President Coker—who went along the line of the B. R. T. instilling riot and fire into the minds of the people in a like manner instead of leaving to the courts a matter that belonged to them."

Mr. Jerome was asked about the reported deal between Murphy and Hearst for delegates to the State Convention.

"The Murphy incident is an epic," he replied, "and good poets are busy writing it. Some one should write the words and music to Murphy. He is singing, 'Those Daring Days'."

Murphy's Smitten Cheek.

"Some two thousand years ago the doctrine was put forth that when you were smitten upon one cheek the thing to do was to turn the other. But when Murphy came along no one has but the practice into politics. Murphy turned the other cheek and was smitten, then he turned the other, and now he is hunting for a third."

"Murphy should not be treated harshly by the papers. This is a Christian world and a Christian example should be given. This is a campaign of the Ten Commandments."

Running on the Ten Commandments as a platform, Hearst is running on them. Hearst is the greatest exponent of all of us. No one in public life has been so great as Hearst for the Ten Commandments."

WOMEN INJURED BY STAMPEDE IN BLAZING CAR

Trampled Under Feet of Men in Panic on Broadway.

VICTIMS BADLY BRUISED.

Carried Into Near-By Store, Revived and Sent Home.

In a panic in a Broadway car at Thirtieth street this afternoon, three women were trampled upon by frantic men trying to escape.

The car, south-bound, had rounded "Dead Man's Curve" at Fourteenth street, and was going down Broadway at a lively rate with its thirty-five passengers when it came to a sudden stop at Thirtieth street.

The "traveler," which conducts the electric current from the channel rails to the motors of the car, caught or an imperfect joint and brought the car up short. Immediately flames shot up from the groove and enveloped the car.

The passengers were thrown from their seats by the sudden stop and the flames added to the confusion. All the men seemed to be the first to get out of the car. When they were out Conductor Daniel Storm found three women prostrate under the seats, having been thrown down and trampled on by the stronger.

Carried Woman from Car.

Clerks from the store of Rogers, Peet & Co. on that corner, and several men on the sidewalks carried the three women into the store, where they were revived. While they had been severely bruised they were able to go to their homes.

Motorman James McElroy ran back to Fourteenth street and turned in a fire alarm.

The firemen extinguished the flames by throwing sand into the groove. The car was then switched back, being pushed by another, and was taken to the barns.

Broadway was soon packed with persons from curb to curb. The hundreds of tall shops and factories in the neighborhood poured out their thousands of employees, and these, with the ordinarily heavy traffic of that busy spot, added to a crowd which gave the police a busy half hour.

In the confusion the women, who had been injured in the panic in the car, got away before the police could get their names. Conductor Storm and the clerks said that all three had been badly bruised, evidently where those who were stronger had stepped on them in their frantic efforts to get out of the car.

ICE TRUST IS STILL BEFORE GRAND JURY

The Grand Jury continued its investigation into the alleged conspiracy which has made the price of ice excessive today. The session was devoted to the examination of documentary evidence which was received by Judge Rosinsky from secret sources, and submitted by him to the Grand Jury yesterday.

Persons named in the documentary evidence were subpoenaed to appear at the Grand Jury room in the Criminal Court Building next Monday morning, when their evidence will be taken.

Foreman Karsch, of the Grand Jury, held a long consultation on the bench with Judge Rosinsky today. It is expected that, despite the injustice of the District Attorney's office, extreme action will be taken to punish the ice conspirators early next week.

SEEING HER SON DROWN, MOTHER TRIES SUICIDE

Mrs. Marley Had to Be Dragged from the Water at Rockaway Beach.

John Marley, thirteen years old, was dragged to his death by the undertow at Seaside, Rockaway Beach, this afternoon while seven persons, including a mother were making efforts to rescue him.

The last ventured into the surf at a point where there are no ropes. When he found he was being carried out, he screamed for help. Mrs. Marley was on the beach in her bathing suit. She leaped in to save her son, but was quickly strangled by the waves and had to be carried out. He lies.

Two policemen in their uniforms, four citizens and a life saver all tried to save the lad, but he went down before any of them could get near him. When the mother saw the boy sink she became frantic and made several attempts to reach him. Later she fainted into hysterics. Her home is said to be somewhere in Harlem. She has been spending the summer at a private house in Rockaway Beach.
